

Carbon Steel Flanges

Chhaged Steel & Alloys are aggressively venturing into exporting of our products to various countries. Carbon Steel Slip-On Flanges is a ring that is set over the line end, the flange face extending from the finish of the line by sufficient distance to apply a weld bead within diameter. It is valuable for liquids at low pressing factors or with little danger of spillage. They are normally utilized in, low-pressure packed aircraft, cooling water lines, firefighting water lines, and cycle lines for substances like steam, condensates, oil and gas, and so on, it will be delivered from reused or virgin steel.

It is utilized to seal the finish of pipelines, valves, or other associations. With high elasticity, it is accessible with a raised face and reinforcements for simple establishment. It is an iron-carbon combination that comprises up to 2.1 wt.% carbon. Carbon doesn't have the least indicated content of other alloying components, but it regularly contains manganese. Carbon steel Blind Flange has a face thickness of a flange, a matching face type, and a similar bolting pattern.

It is used to seal a nozzle opening on a pressure vessel, they are not having a boring center or a hub. Carbon steel forged flanges are usually welded onto pipes or screwed onto a threaded pipe end and then joined with bolts to make the connection. To make a connection, it is welded onto pipes or screwed onto a threaded pipe end and then joined with bolts. They are used as a connection component for pipes, pumps and valves, and other equipment to form a pipework system.
