It is essential for power generation, refrigeration. All heat exchanger tubes are built on the same principle i.e that a hot fluid flowing around a colder fluid will transfer its heat in the direction of cold flow.

Stainless Steel Heat Exchanger Tube is most commonly used for heat exchanger in large chemical processes and other oil refineries, and it is well suited for higher-pressure applications. It made up of a shell with a bundle of tubes inside it. One fluid runs through the tubes, and another fluid flows over the tubes in order to transfer heat between the two fluids. Stainless Steel Tube Coil Heat Exchanger is the most efficient due to turbulent flow on both sides. It is most efficient due to turbulent flow on both the sides.
